The Farm FRONT-

By J. HOMER MILLER
County Farm Agent

Olice Mason did have a good crop of tobacco. Before you read your paper last Friday had completely destroyed his crop. A number of tobacco crops were destroyed or severely damaged by wind and hail last Thursday afternoon.

Seed cover crops on all row crop land, especially tobacco land. The higher the fertility the greater the need for protecting the soil during the winter.

Pat Brown of Hardin is the first in the county to build a bunker silo. This is similar to a trench silo except it is above ground. Pat used old cross ties for posts and the side. He also poured a concrete bottom. This is a cheap way to build a silo.

Bob Bowlin, Icy McGregor, Robert Turner and O. L. Chumler have constructed trench silos this summer. Some have already filled the silos with drought damaged corn.

H. E. Rothwell, former farm agent of this county, is now working the area with headquarters at Mayfield. He will be working with the Farm and Home Development Program.

The Farm and Home Development program is open to all farm families of Marshall County. We need more families in the program this fall. Why don't you take advantage of the program and come by the office and sign an application.

Drain Clark's River. Yes, it is now possible through a recent act of Congress. If you are interested in such a project for the county see your Soil Conservation District Supervisor.

Understanding and equity between labor and management. We believe that individual participation is sound, effective civil and national defense programs will assure our nation's security. We believe that peace-loving peoples throughout the world see a beacon of hope in the friendly cooperation between Canada and the U. S. and we proclaim it to the United Nations as a pattern for all international relationships. We believe that the appalling waste of life and property on highways, farms and industries and homes is a national tragedy which can be immeasurably reduced through safety programs that are carefully planned and well executed. We believe that the prosperity and future development of our nations is dependent upon the proper utilization, conservation, and restoration of our vast natural resources. We believe that illegal traffic in narcotics constitutes a deadly threat to youth and the moral stamina of our peoples, and we rededicate ourselves to the stamping out of this menace. We believe that boys and girls, who become morally, spiritually, physically and mentally strong, are the hope of the future, and that we can best serve youth through positive programs that will emphasize the values of our American heritage.

Especially do we extend our heartfelt thanks to Dr. Collier, Dr. Miller, Rev. A. H. Downs, the singers and the Linn Funeral Home. Your kindness will long be remembered. May God bless all of you in your prayer. The Children and Grandchildren

Growing by Working

Lesson for September 5, 1954

"NOW I get me up to work, I pray thee, Lord, I may not shrink. When I lay me down at night, I pray thee, Lord, my work be right." These lines by an unknown author hung in the bedroom of a man who during his 85 years showed that his prayer was sincere. He was a Christian; and a Christian will think of his work as done always in the sight of God. A janitor of a church was asked why he kept a certain place behind the pulpit so clean. "Nobody can see it," he was told. "But God sees it," the janitor said. The Bible gives us some light on work in general, as God sees it.

Watershed Plans Announced

Frankfort—Details of the state organization to assist in development of plans for watershed flood control projects in Kentucky were announced this week by Conservation Commissioner Henry Ward.

Governor Wetherby has designated the Department of Conservation, which Ward heads, as the state agency to administer details of the Watershed Protection and Flood Prevention Act (Hope-Alken Bill) recently enacted by Congress. Under the provisions of the act, local groups desiring to secure a project for their watershed will file their applications through the state agency.

Ward said that the U. S. Secretary of Agriculture, who will administer the new law, has been informed that the state feels that the Soil Conservation Districts which are now organized in all 120 Kentucky counties are the best qualified local organizations to initiate the projects and carry out the programs required of local sponsors by the act.

"The new act is designed to promote closer working relations between the federal government, the state and local interests in the development of flood control programs on small watersheds," Ward said. "The act provides for the establishment of a local organization such as a Soil Conservation District must sponsor a project, work with the federal authorities in developing plans for it, participate in the awarding of contracts for the work to be done, and agree to maintain the project after completion."

The act provides for "flood prevention (including structural and land-treatment measures) and agricultural phases of the conservation, development, utilization and disposal of water" in watershed of subwatershed areas not exceeding 250,000 acres and not including any single structure which provides more than 5,000 acre-feet of total capacity.

The act will be administered for the federal government by the U. S. Department of Agriculture through the U. S. Soil Conservation Service, H. K. Gayle, Lexington, is state conservationist for the Service in Kentucky.

Governor Wetherby explained that the Department of Conservation was designated as the state agency to work with the program in Kentucky because three divisions in that department will be involved in the program. They are the Divisions of Soil and Water Resources, Flood Control and Water Usage and Forestry. In addition, Ward is chairman of the Soil Conservation Committee, chairman of the Kentucky Water Pollution Control Commission and chairman of the Strip Mining and Reclamation Commission which may be affected by details of the new program.

"The new act provides wonderful opportunities for Kentucky to advance an on-the-land type of flood control program vitally necessary to this state," Ward said. "We have more miles of navigable streams than any other state, and therefore we have an abundance of watersheds which fit into the picture of this program."

"The act also provides encouragement for small cities and groups of landowners interested in storing water for their use during periods of drought," Ward continued. "The federal government will pay the cost of the basic program involving flood prevention or related features. It invites other interested parties to participate by bearing the additional cost which could provide for storage of water for later use. For example, many Kentucky towns have found their present water supplies inadequate during the summer."

They might work out a plan to provide additional storage capacity in a flood control reservoir at a fraction of what it would cost them to build a reservoir alone. Groups of farmers might do the same thing to provide water for irrigation.

"Projects which would encourage the most complete control, development and utilization of the water resources of a watershed undoubtedly will be given the most favorable consideration."

Copies of application forms for projects under the act have been sent to local Soil Conservation Service offices, boards of supervisors of Soil Conservation Districts, and additional copies may be obtained from the Department of Conservation at Frankfort, or the U. S. Soil Conservation Service, Lexington.
